Marsha Diane Arnold is the author of Lost. Found. (Roaring Brook) and Heart of a Tiger (Dial Books for Young Readers). She lives in Alva, Florida. Phyllis Tildes is the author and illustrator of Baby Animals Black and White and Animals in Camouflage. She lives in Savannah, Georgia.

Cute book

This is a wonderful board book about animals and sleep for babies and toddlers. From the cover I expected a sweet story about little animals sleeping and it is so much more. Arnold manages to teach her young audience a wealth of information about animals and napping on just a few short pages with brief words. Did you know dolphins nap while they swim? How about that monkeys nap on their moms' backs? I imagine a young audience finding this book interesting and also perhaps a bit silly as they envision their naps taking place in a tree like a sloth or hanging upside down like a bat. Soft illustrations, brief text, and interesting information together makes this a great board book.

Story books are lovely for our littlest readers, but some toddlers are more enchanted with real life. For those special little learners, this book -- artfully crafted by Marsha Diane Arnold -- is exactly on point. Animal lovers will discover new facts and fun connections as they find baby animals drift off to sleep just the way human babies do. And what's better than common ground among friends! A must have board book for kids who love to learn -- aka ALL KIDS.

It's never too soon to start your child's library. The ten-page book is filled with charming pictures by Phyllis Tildes. The illustrations feature an assortment of animals in various settings paired with descriptive two word captions set in large type. Baby Animals Take a Nap includes an imaginative mix of penguins, dolphins, bats, koalas, sloths, monkeys, foxes, and otters, ending with a human infant snuggling on daddy's lap.

My sons and I love Marsha Diane Arnold's WAITING FOR SNOW and LOST. FOUND, so we were thrilled to discover her new board book series. These books are perfect for preschoolers and anyone who loves baby animals. As a teacher, I appreciate the way they can also be used to launch science lessons. Here's to Charlesbridge for publishing these gems.

Marsha Dane Arnold has given us a winner! I bought this one and Baby Animals Take a Bath for my neighbor who takes care of her toddler grandson. When I took them over, the little guy grabbed Baby Animals Take a Nap with his little hand and wanted his grandmother to open it up right away! I loved the gentle illustrations and sweetness, and I learned a lot myself about the correct names for each animal. Well researched and very age appropriate.

Ms. Arnold did not disappoint in her two new board books, Baby Animals Take a Nap and Baby Animals take a Bath. They are delightful and fresh and my grandchildren are in love with them. The unique animals included in the books have created much discussion in our household concerning the various napping methods used by animals and why. The illustrations are wonderful, too. These books are now a must for future shower gifts so all babies can enjoy them!

Sweet early nonfiction book that is perfect for bedtime. Kids will love the cute illustrations.
